Assembly Education Committee Passes Bill A4365

This Assembly Education Committee unanimously passed Bill A4365, which establishes a Council for Community Recovery and Family Success within the Department of Community Affairs to oversee a Statewide initiative promoting the social and economic well-being of infants, children, youth, and families. The council, made up of 25 members from state agencies and community representatives, will coordinate services, develop policies, and advocate for a State Bill of Rights for Infants, Children, Youth, and Families.

Key responsibilities include:

- Identifying gaps in existing support services.
- Recommending improvements to coordination between state agencies and community-based organizations.
- Developing preventive services to reduce the need for distress services (e.g., crisis intervention).
- Exploring public-private funding strategies.
- Establishing county-level family success councils to assess needs and provide local support.

The bill appropriates $4 million for these initiatives, with funds carrying over annually if unused. If this passes through the house and becomes codified, opportunities for OST providers are:

1. Participate in Local Family Success Councils – By engaging in county-level councils, OST providers can help shape policies and ensure out-of-school programs are included in funding and support networks.
2. Access New Funding Streams – The council will oversee funding priorities, and OST providers could advocate for inclusion in preventive service allocations.
3. Enhance Cross-Sector Collaboration – OST programs can partner with schools, health organizations, and social services to provide integrated support for children and families.

OMB temporarily pauses federal agency grants, loans, and assistance

By Erik Peterson - Originally posted on January 28, 2025

Update: February 10, 2025: Today the federal judge in the case brought by Attorney Generals in 22 states and the District of Columbia found that the Trump administration has not fully followed his order to unfreeze federal spending and told the White House to release all funds from grants. U.S. District Court Judge John McConnell ruled that ongoing struggles to get federal money for things like early childhood education, pollution reduction and HIV prevention research violated his Jan. 31 order. He ordered the Trump administration to “immediately take every step necessary” to follow his temporary restraining over halting its plans for a sweeping freeze of federal funding.

Update: February 4, 2025: Yesterday, U.S. District Judge Loren AliKhan in Washington, D.C., granted a temporary restraining order against the federal grant, loan and aid freeze, siding with the National Council of Nonprofits and other nonprofit organization defendants that claimed they were still unable to access federal funds despite the government's insistence that the OMB memo from January 27 was no longer in effect. The decision follows the administrative stay Judge AliKhan issued last Tuesday, January 28 that was set to expire by 5 p.m. yesterday. Update: February 3. The temporary restraining order preventing the freeze or pause of federal funds went into effect and will be reviewed when the court reconvenes on February 7.

Note - this decision is separate from the case being heard by a Rhode Island federal judge who ruled Friday, January 31 to block the Trump Administration's freeze of various federal spending programs tied to his executive orders. The Rhode Island case only applies to the 22 states and District of Columbia that had filed the lawsuit.

Update: January 31, 2025: Clarification that while the Administration's Office of Management and Budget rescinded the memo from last Monday, the review and vetting of all federal assistance grants and loans (except those to individuals) being conducted by federal agencies is still underway. Federal agencies are reviewing all grants and loans to ensure they comply with new Executive Orders including the Order "Ending Radical And Wasteful Government DEI Programs And Preferencing," which ceases all federal government and contracted DEI, DEIA, and "environmental justice" programs and policies, positions, committees, programs, services, activities, budgets, and expenditures. The two federal court cases, filed to stop the review and vetting of grants to ensure compliance with the Orders, continue as of this morning.

PLEASE NOTE: Most K-12 formula grant programs already have their FY 2024 funding – this pause should not affect most K-12 formula grant programs between now and February 10 or whenever OMB completes its review of the submitted information because those programs. Title I, IDEA, Title II, etc. received all their FY 2024 funding on either July 1 or October 1, 2024. Virtually all K-12 programs, except Impact Aid, get their funding not at the beginning of the fiscal year or when a continuing resolution is enacted but on the following July 1 as "forward funding" or as "advance funding" that becomes available the first day of the subsequent fiscal year. These programs have their current funding already, so it is not at risk. These programs wouldn't get their FY 2025 funding until this July or October.

NJSACC meets with New Jersey State Senator Angela V. McKnight

Recently, NJSACC CEO Ebony D. Grace had the honor of meeting with New Jersey State Senator Angela V. McKnight to discuss the critical challenges facing school-age childcare in New Jersey. Did you know that low-income families access OST (Out-of-School Time) programs at just 38% — less than half the rate of their upper-middle-income peers? With 650,000 children left without access, the need for equitable, high-quality OST programs has never been more urgent. By investing in OST, NJ will join the ranks of 27 other states who have made addressing this issue a priority.

Youth Voice Week (March 24-28, 2025) - details coming soon!

Youth Voice Week is a dedicated period where young people are encouraged to actively share their opinions, experiences, and ideas on issues that matter to them, often focusing on the importance of afterschool programs and highlighting the value of youth voices in decision-making processes within their communities. We're lifting up youth perspectives. Join us in elevating youth voices and the role of afterschool and summer programs in providing youth with opportunities to lead and grow.

With federal budget cuts looming, it's particularly important to connect with our representatives in Congress and share with them the power of afterschool.

Get featured on Afterschool Alliance's website! Each day of Youth Voice Week Afterschool Alliance will publish a guest blog submitted by a program or youth. Your submission can be an existing piece; no need to create something new! Selected pieces will be published on the Afterschool Snack, and promoted on their social feed and their weekly newsletter. Send an email with your submission to info@afterschoolalliance.org.

At the event, Tyneisha Gibbs, Director of Policy & Youth Advocacy, reflected on how our work, particularly through out-of-school time (OST) programs, has continually empowered youth to become active participants in their communities.

For more than two decades, NJSACC has supported the NJDOE Civic Engagement grantees as their training and technical assistance provider.

- Egg Harbor City Public Schools
- Future Leaders Organization, Pleasantville Public Schools
- La Casa De Don Pedro, Newark Public Schools
- Raritan Bay YMCA, Perth Amboy Public Schools
- Rutgers University—Camden, Camden Public Schools

Over the past year, NJSACC has reached several key milestones in advancing civic engagement:

- We secured a supplemental grant from NJDOE to further expand our civic engagement initiatives.
- We helped plan and execute a highly successful Youth Advocacy Day at the NJ State House, where students from Paterson and Newark shared their voices.
- We partnered with The Gem Project to provide technical assistance to NJDOE 21st Century Community Learning Center grantees focused on civic engagement.
- In collaboration with Generation Citizen, we delivered training for educators and youth development practitioners using their nationally recognized curriculum.
- Each of our grantees successfully launched local Youth Councils at their 21st Century Community Learning Centers, which spearheaded a statewide youth letter-writing campaign to the Governor's office last December.
- We wrapped up a Civic Engagement Community of Practice with The Gem Project and NJDOE 21st CCLC Project Directors, ensuring every grantee received an individualized support plan for 2025.

Looking ahead, We are excited about our plans for 2025. We will be launching a Statewide Youth Advisory Board and preparing for Youth Advocacy Day on March 24, 2025.
